A Tribute To An Angel

A saint came down from above, They named her Allie B.
Whose mission was to share her love, With her earthly family.
She worn her crown of kindness, Like a halo made of gold, and spread her wings around us, To protect us from the cold.
The jewels she held onto, Could not be bought or sold.
They came straight from the Bible, The one true mother lode.
She lived her life accordingly, And prayed both night and day,
So she could walk within the light, And clearly see her way.
During her precious lifetime, So few could say, If any,
That they could do, What she has done, To love so much and so many.
Forever I will treasure, Always and constantly,
The happiness and pleasure, Of her precious company.
An angel has returned home, To take her rightful place.
And left behind a love song, That can never be erased.
